More consumers are choosing glass water bottles over disposable plastic. Glass is an eco-friendly choice, made from natural and abundant materials. By choosing a glass water bottle you are helping to reduce single-use plastic bottle pollution, keeping our planet and oceans clean.

We only use High-Density Borosilicate Glass for our water bottles and glassware.

The art of glass-making dates back thousands of years. Many refinements in glass-making came out of the 14th century from the Italian island of Murano. Since then, many glass formulas have been created with the most common being ordinary soda lime glass which accounts for over 90 percent of all manufactured glass today.

Borosilicate glass was first developed in the late 19th century to fulfill a need for glass that wouldn't shatter under extreme temperature changes. The addition of Boron Oxide produces a glass with superior durability, clarity, chemical and heat resistance. It can handle rapid temperature changes, is resistant to thermal shock and less likely to break and shatter. Borosilicate glass is BPA free, BPS free, Lead free and Pthalate free. The non-porous surface does not retain odors or flavors, leaving you with just pure natural taste.

Borosilicate glass is used for scientific laboratory and medical equipment because of its clarity, temperature and chemical resistance.

Used for glass blowing and lampworking, borosilicate glass has a higher melting point, able to withstand a wide range of temperature changes without cracking or shattering.

Because of the higher melting point, more heat and labor are required to produce borosilicate glass. The benefits of borosilicate glass far outweigh the additional cost to manufacture.
